People ask all the time “What is the purpose of a credit union”?

The initial purpose in extending the credit union's goal of services is to encourage members to save money. An additional purpose is to offer loans to members. In fact, credit unions have traditionally made loans to people of everyday incomes. Credit unions can charge lower rates for loans (as well as pay higher dividends on shares), because they are nonprofit cooperatives. Rather than paying profits to stockholders, credit unions return earnings to members in the form of dividends or improved services and products.
